THREE FULL ARMY DIVISIONS REPORTED READY TO STRIKE AT TURK FORTRESS OF ADRIANOPLE.

RUSSIAN TACTICS WIN

Czar's Army Threatens to Surround Detached Flank of Turks Near Stanislan, Now Occupied by Russians.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Paris, March 6.—Bulgaria has mobilized secretly three full army divisions in the neighborhood of Thracia, according to information contained in a Saloniki dispatch to the Havas agency based upon what is said to be reliable sources.

The same source is responsible for the statement that the Kostendil division has been sent to an unknown destination. An unnamed officer high in the Bulgarian army is quoted as saying:

"These troops will be used in an advance on Adrianople."

Clear Straits of Mines.
Paris, March 6.—The Dardanelles now has been cleared of mines as far as Chanak Kalesi, about a third of the distance through the straits, says a Tenedos dispatch to the Petit Parisien, dated March 5.

The mine workers are working under the protection of the allied warships, which are keeping up a steady bombardment of the forts on the European side.

Standard Recaptured.
Petrograd, via London, March 6.—Reoccupancy by the Russians of Stanislan is regarded here as justifying their claims that the rapid advance of the Austrian-German right flank in Galicia was hazardous so long as their left flank in Galicia was successfully held back by the Russian forces.

The right Austria-German flank advanced ineffectually, apparently without regard to the inability of the left wing to co-operate in the contemplated encircling movement.

The right flank in consequence is now in danger of having the tables turned and being surrounded by Russian forces.

Occupied Bukovina.
The Russians now look for the re-occupation of the Austrians from Czernowitz and Bukovina, where the Austrian position will become untenable if the Russians are able to continue the successful movement initiated at Stanislan. Having abandoned the offensive along the northern front, the Germans are now seeking merely to fortify the Russian territory taken in the advance from East Prussia and to establish a defensive line.

The Russians apparently have been able, however, to interfere seriously with this plan by the advancement of the tenth army corps, which the Germans asserted was virtually destroyed as a result of the German victory in East Prussia.

An official communication received in Petrograd from the Russian army in the Caucasus dated March 4, says that the Russian troops are co-ordinating with the same success their offensive operations in the vicinity of the Tchoruk river, in Turkish Armenia, southwest of Batum, there have been no other serious fighting between the two armies on other parts of the Russian front.

Preparations of Allies.
London, March 6.—The end of the thirty-first week of the war and the signs of better weather conditions for the winter have not lessened the readiness for that concentrated onslaught on the Germans in the preparation of which General Joffre has been working for the last four months.

From the sea to the dunes of Flanders to Arras in France, the British and Belgian armies appear to have withstood successfully all the attempts of the Germans to break through their lines, while from Arras to the snow top ridges of the Vosges, the French continue to win slowly.

This is especially true in the Champagne district, although the skillful German commanders exact a heavy price for every step gained in this direction. The French hope their efforts will soon result in forcing the city of Rheims from attention of the German howitzers.

Russian Valor Inspires.
The unqualified optimism with which the Russian press has commented in London newspapers today, the approaching gigantic struggle is regarded in Great Britain, France and Russia, is attributed to the remarkable recuperative powers shown by the troops of Emperor Nicholas.

These soldiers, in spite of the fierce law of the German army under Von Hindenburg, have been able not only to resist the pressure of a steady assault but to push the invaders back along the whole front, until at one time it is admitted in Berlin the fighting has again moved very near the East Prussian frontier.

War News Summary

In Roumania, the chamber of deputies is considering the granting of a credit of $40,000,000 to the government for military purposes and the calling to the colors of the 1915 recruits.

Greece is awaiting eagerly the decision of the crown council concerning their intention in the war, and an Athens dispatch states that popular feeling is in favor of such a step.

Russia is prosecuting one of the most vigorous offensive movements in the whole front. Earlier dispatch yesterday admitted the capture by the Russians of Myezyniec near the Prussian frontier, but in general it is asserted that Russian attacks are being repulsed. Petrograd reports steady progress.

In the West fighting is becoming more general. The battle in Champagne continues with unabated ferocity and there are signs of increasing military activity in Belgium.

Apparently that Turkey has already decided she had had enough of the Egyptian venture and is rushing her troops back to Constantinople. Austria-Hungary's reported reply to Constantinople, when the Turks asked for naval assistance, "you had better move your capital to Asia," is being published in London newspapers today.

Paris, March 6.—The war office gave out this afternoon the following statement:

"Somewhat lively artillery actions occurred yesterday around Nieuport and Trespes. From the Lys to the Aisne there was an intermittent cannonade."

"In Champagne our progress yesterday in the northwest of Beauséjour caused the Germans last night to undertake fresh counter-attacks which they repulsed. Our advance in the region of Perthes has been maintained. Northwest of Pont Au Moussons a well directed shelling upon a farm caused a panic among the soldiers occupying it. They fled to the woods. Near the forest of Narroy whole bodies of Germans unsuccessfully attempted attack on our outposts."

London, March 6.—The Rome correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph company sends word that the German commissaries called to the colors today.

SEE SUBMARINE SINK A FLAGLESS STEAMER

Officers of Dutch Liner Arriving in New York Tell How Ship Was Scuttled by German Crew.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
New York, March 6.—The attack of a German submarine, silently unheralded and unexpectedly upon a big merchant ship that flew no flag, was witnessed from the bridge of the Dutch liner "Rindam," in the North Sea, according to Captain Van der Heuvel of the Rindam, which reached here today from Rotterdam.

The attack occurred Feb. 24, and the stricken vessel slowly settled to the bottom as the Rindam steamed away.

"We heard a muffled explosion," said the Rindam's captain, "when a white cloud of steam and smoke was rising from the ship and slowly spreading over the sea. The steamer had been struck and was sinking rapidly. We immediately prepared to lower our life boats. As they swung out on the davits we saw the merchantman lower her own boats and some of her crew came on board."

"Then came the vessel's wireless calls for help. In ten minutes or thereabouts a British destroyer steamed alongside and began searching for the submarine. The destroyer signalled that no assistance was needed and advised us to proceed on our way cautiously. This we did."

MILLIONS IN RESERVE OVER LEGAL REQUIREMENT

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
New York, March 6.—The statement of the actual condition of clearing house banks and trust companies for the week shows that they hold $125,593,740 reserve in excess of legal requirements. This is a decrease of $5,167,960 from last week.

STEGLER'S TRIAL SET FOR MARCH 10; WIFE HOLDS CENTER OF INTEREST

Richard P. Stegler (right) handcuffed to deputy; Mrs. Stegler.

Richard P. Stegler, the German-American involved in New York's passport scandal, will be tried in a federal court in New York on March 10. The trial is expected to offer some sensations, as Stegler insists upon his ability to prove that the German embassy at Washington is involved in passport frauds. Mrs. Stegler still holds the center of interest, following her exoneration by a New York court after two reporters had lured her to a hotel with the idea of placing her in a compromising position.

LUMBERJACK SHOOT; FIVE DEAD; FIVE HURT

Tragedy Occurs in Brunswick, Georgia—Fired at Random and Later Killed by Officer.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Brunswick, Ga., March 6.—Four men were shot and killed and five others seriously wounded here today by Monroe Phillips, a lumberman, who fired at random on the street. Phillips was killed by a policeman who sought to arrest him. He and 27 other citizens of Brunswick.

Several of the wounded are prominent citizens of Brunswick. Worry over financial difficulties which he blamed on others, is said to have made Phillips temporarily insane.

He first went to the office of Attorney Dunwiddie and opened fire on him from a shot gun and killed him almost instantly. From the street corner the lumberman then began firing on everyone in sight.

Buying Experience

The price of experience is cheap the first time, but it becomes expensive if it has to be bought over and over again. Some national advertisers have not yet found this out. Many have. That is why the drift of advertising is away from other mediums and toward newspapers.

The manufacturer is learning that it pays him to create his demand where it centers at the dealer's counter. He is finding that newspaper advertising not only influences the consumer but makes the local dealer enthusiastic. He is finding it the kind of advertising that pays dividends.

SAVE FORTY-SEVEN FROM MINE TUNNEL OTHERS ARE KILLED

One Hundred and Seventy Thought to Have Been Killed at Hinton Mines—Rescuer Many Bodies.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Hinton, W. Va., March 6.—Forty miners were found alive today in the Layland mine of the New River & Pocahontas Coal company, where they had been entombed since last Tuesday, when a gas explosion wrecked one mine and seriously damaged two others. About 170 men as far as could be checked up, were thought to have lost their lives and thus far 78 dead bodies have been taken out.

Hope for any of the remaining has been abandoned. This morning rescuers in oxygen helmets came upon an entry of No. 3, which had been bratticed off. Close to the brattice five men were found alive, but in a weakened condition. These were able to walk from the mine. The band reported that nine others were alive, not far from where they were found.

The rescuers hastened their efforts and soon came upon more living men who were able to leave the mine unassisted in most cases. When the entry had been explored a total of 30 men had been checked up, all apparently little the worse for the four days' entombment.

All haste is being made to reach the remainder of the unexplored entries in the hope that many others will be found still living.

GRAEME THOMSON FIRST ENGLISH CIVILIAN TO HOLD DIRECTOR'S JOB

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
London, March 6.—Graeme Thomson, to whom Winston Churchill referred to in parliament as "one of the discoverers of the war," is the first civilian ever to hold the position of director of the admiralty department. Thomson, who is 39 years old, is now described "as the greatest naval expert of his time."

When the war broke out Thomson was a superintending clerk at a salary of about $3,500 a year. He had served in the department, after completing his education at Oxford, for twelve years. His ability, which showed itself in emergency days, attracted the attention of the first lord, and in a short space of time he was made assistant director of transports, and at the end of three months put in the charge of the department at a large salary.

WILL NOT ABOLISH ENGLISH LANGUAGE

Teuton Educator Gives Reason for Maintaining Saxon Language—German Must be Language of Masters.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Berlin, March 6.—The much-mooted plan to abolish the study of English in the German public schools, is strongly opposed by Albert Bockelmann, director of the Zeitschen higher academy, in an interview in the Rheinisch-Westfälische Zeitung.

He declares that, much as patriotic students may regret the English will undoubtedly continue to be the trade language of the world and that, so far from ceasing to learn it, Germans should become proficient in it.

Quite as unreasonable as the proposition is to put the ban on English in Germany, he says, is the talk in England to forego German in favor of "simple, rich and musical," Russian, Serbian, Flemish or Japanese. The Germans, he says, might as well take up Turkish.

"Even the most brilliant victory over England," declares Herr Bockelmann, "and its various dependencies, will not mean that English as a universal trade language will be displaced. More than ever will the German youth, going out into the world to make a living, have need of the English language. If he does he can, in the friendly 'blockade' of trade, sink the boat of his opponent. More than ever before, if we are to live the practical life, the slogan must be 'Teuton English'."

"That after the war the world will have to learn German we believe to be a fact. Even England will have to take an interest in the language of the German barbarians in spite of the wealth, simplicity and music of Russian. And the national consciousness of the German-American has been so strengthened by the war that the cause and growth of the German language in North America is certain to be promoted.

Our own beautiful, versatile, well constructed German tongue would suffer endlessly if it were to become the universal medium of every-day intercourse. Wherever we may require it—and we hope that we shall require it—the world will have to find it convenient to speak German. But it were a terrible pity for it to become the jargon of universal ports and the patois of the highways and byways of the world. German must be the language of masters."

SEVEN HUNDRED TURKS SENT TO DESERT CAMP BY BRITISH OFFICERS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Cairo, March 6.—Nearly 700 prisoners captured on February 3 have been sent from the barracks at Cairo to the desert camp prepared for them by the British. The prisoners were from Syria, with a few Bedouins and two Indians, who were first captured by the Turks, made to join their forces and then surrendered at the first opportunity to the British. Some prisoners were uniformed, and a few were poorly clad. They seemed to have been taken from the desert, and the Egyptians looked on with interest at the fulfillment of the prediction that if Turks came, it would be as prisoners.

FRENCH SHIP IS BURNING IN MID-SEA

STEAMER LA TOURNAIE TAKES FIRE 1,200 MILES WEST OF HAVRE SAYS WIRELESS REPORT.

LINERS RUSH TO AID

Passengers and Crew Have Been Rescued According to Advices Received in New York—Aided At Voltorno Fire.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
London, March 6.—The steamship La Touraine, at latitude 45.5 north and longitude 10.14 west, according to a wireless message received here. Five steamers have gone to the assistance of the La Touraine, the message says.

Save Persons on Board

New York, March 6.—Maritime circles have received word that the passengers and crew of the La Touraine are safe.

The message telling of the fire was received at Lloyd's from the wireless station at Valencia, Ireland. In addition to giving the position of the La Touraine, it states that the steamers Rotterdam, Swannow, Cornishman, Arabic, and others were going to her assistance.

The La Touraine has aboard 38 first cabin passengers and 46 in the steerage. Among the first class passengers is Paul Faguet, general agent of the French line in this city. The La Touraine, when she sailed last Saturday, had on board 344 cases of cartridges intended for use in the European war.

Eighty-Four Passengers

When the La Touraine sailed from this port last Saturday morning, she had 84 passengers, 38 in the first cabin and 46 in steerage. Her crew consisted of approximately 200 men. The vessel was on her way to Havre to leave this port the same day, the sailings being heaviest recorded here for some time.

At the local offices on the French line it was learned this morning that confirmation regarding the Touraine had been received. Maritime circles, however, received word from abroad that all of the passengers and crew were saved, but this information was not confirmed here.

The La Touraine was heavily loaded when she steamed out of the harbor last Saturday. She carried 133 cases of cartridges and a varied assortment of supplies for the allied commissaries. On board she had 120 tons of her cargo consisted of uniforms, cloth for soldiers, the trenches. There were 1,000 cases of medicine, as well as many hundred wagon wheels and 275 bars of silver. In addition there was a large assortment of food stuffs.

Sailed for Havre Feb. 27

The French liner La Touraine sailed from New York Feb. 27 for Havre. The position of the new message is approximately 1,200 miles west from her port of destination. Among the passengers were five doctors and nine nurses on their way to France to attend to the wounded in hospital at the Chateau de Passy, near Sens.

The doctors are Joseph L. Wheelwright, C. W. Wood, G. Bradlock, A. O. Jiminis and John S. Irwin. The nurses, all of whom are graduates of the French hospital in New York, are the Misses Alma Marie McCormick, Dorothy O'Connell, Eugene H. Lyon, and Franchot. Franchot, formerly Ellen O'Hanlon, Molly McGrath, Nellie Burdett Parson and Beda Lorcina Petron.

The La Touraine is a steamer of 3,295 tons, under command of Captain Causin, is one of the older transatlantic liners, having been built in 1898. Since she was launched the La Touraine has history an interesting part in her career.

Aided at Voltorno Fire

She arrived in New York October 28, 1913, with forty-two persons rescued from the transatlantic liner Voltorno, which burned at sea with loss of 132 lives. Captain Causin was one of the first commanders of rescue steamers to get a boat over in the heavy sea to aid in the rescue work. The captain and crew were decorated with medals for their bravery on this occasion.

It was the captain of the La Touraine who warned the ill-fated Titanic of the presence of icebergs in her course. Once before the steamer was threatened by fire when flames were discovered in the stateroom while she lay at her dock in Havre on Jan. 21, 1903. There were no passengers aboard and the damage was not serious. She was withdrawn from service for a time in 1907 because of serious damage to her machinery. The discovery was made just before sailing from New York.

On Another Occasion a member of her crew was killed by bursting of a steam pipe.

When the European war began the entire carrying capacity of the La Touraine was reserved for American soldiers struggling to get home from France. She arrived in New York December 18, 1914, thirty-six hours overdue because of hurricanes she encountered. High seas swept over her deck while passengers were being taken down below. The steamer had 620 feet long with a beam of 51 feet and a depth of 24.8.

CUT EXPENSES IN STATE MANAGEMENT

LEGISLATIVE PRUNING KNIFE
HARD AT WORK IN COMMITTEES.

SLICE APPROPRIATIONS

Legislative Members Take Responsibility for Action in Dead Earnest and Watch All Bills Carefully.

N. R. This is one of a series of articles written exclusively for the Gazette on political matters.
(By Bob Acres.)
Madison, March 6.—If the Wisconsin legislature of 1915 completes what it has so bravely set out to do—the cutting down of state expenses—it will leave a record for itself which will be hard to find fault with. It is the watchword of the members, "Watch the expense list." Attend any committee hearing you please and you will find one or two of the members asking questions on bills as to the expense entailed to the taxpayers if this measure should become a law. Listen to the debates on the floor of the house and it is the same hue and cry.

Nor is this sentiment found alone in the legislative halls. In every branch of state affairs it is discussed and the pruning knife is at work. Take for instance the discovery by the investigating committee that the state was paying $1,502 a year for store purchases for some twenty thousand dollars worth of print paper bought for the Lord knows what reason, by the reform administration agents, and note the results. The state has decided to stop and until some plan can be suggested for its use or disposal it can be stored, so what does the new superintendent of public property do but assemble it and order it to be stored instead of four, at the cost of but $600 a year. This means a saving of $1,002 a year alone in this item.

Well, it is just a sample of what the new administration is trying to accomplish, and a thousand dollars saved here and a thousand dollars saved there totals up wonderfully in the aggregate. In fact, there are so many leaks in the handling of the state's money, so many cases where the authority and the administration of various departments overlap at present, that it will be hard work to close many radical changes that will show material savings until these departments are reorganized, consolidated and an idea of what is to come in a few days. That is, the bills for this purpose are being prepared, and then the public will understand what is being undertaken.

Take, for example, the Hanson bill which was before a senate committee the other day. It calls attention to the fact that almost all of the important commissions having use for engineering services, have their own special engineer. It showed how one man, officially connected with the railway commission, at a nominal salary, was on the payroll of many various committees that his total pay was even more than that of the commissioners in charge of the department. It would consolidate all the engineering departments under one head, with the men employed available for use in various other departments when needed. Just what is to come, to come. Consolidation of allied interests at an immense saving to the taxpayer.

Speaking of the railroad commission, I am going to whisper something to you. Ready as I have been before one of the committees, in fact the bill being taken up referred to the vestibules on railroad cars, two engineers employed by the railway commission, were present to advance arguments favoring the bill. One, on being questioned, was asked if he represented the railway commission or appeared as an individual. He stammered around for a few moments and then said, "As an individual." Well, to make a long story short, he did not talk on the bill at all, but the mere fact he appeared at the hearing, and took part in the deliberations, caused a commotion in the railway commission's offices and as a result two capable "lobbyists" are not connected with the railway and their expert services, but they are not connected with the railway commission any more.

Not mean to reflect on previous members of this same railway commission, but I wish to say that since the advent of the two new members at headquarters in the east wing of the capitol, matters have taken on a business aspect. There has been a general house cleaning, business is being arranged to be handled expeditiously and, with a thorough understanding of the needs and conditions and clerks realize that there is a new regime at the head of affairs and work is what they are expected to do.

But to go back up stairs. What do you think if I told you that the state pays $334,805.18 a year for police duty? You would be astonished. Well, that is about what it amounts to, for the inspectors of various departments employed to see that the laws are obeyed receive this sum yearly, although it is divided between the dairy and food commission, oil inspection, treasury, agricultural commission, fish and game department, board of health, board of control, apiaries, barbers' board, agricultural college, the marshal and veterinarian. Think of that! But it will be changed.

The resignation of President Trotterman, of the board of regents, was the cause of a decided splash in the political puddle the first of the week and it merely uncovered a few more of the discrepancies of the inability of the university management to realize that this was a time when trenchment was needed and not wasteful expenditure of money. It also helped materially the cause of the men who propose, if possible, to repeal the one mill tax, and compel the university to work under a budget. In other words, move the state treasury from the University hill back to the capitol building. Take the university out of politics once and for all.

Under the one mill tax it has been the main object of the university to fill the minds of its students with progressive ideas, to promote the increase of taxation by new gimmicks, so that the taxes would be higher and their share, one mill would be increased materially. There is a strong sentiment favoring raising the dues for students from outside the state to a figure where it will at least pay for the actual cost of their instruction. There is no idea of crippling the university as an educational institution, merely making it an educational, not a political school. In fact, I would not be surprised if in opening of the next college year saw new officers installed in charge, at the present temper of the legislature can be depended upon.

During the past week there have been numerous attempts to pass resolutions relative to the part of the United States in the European war, but they have all met the same fate—defeat. In fact, many valuable hours have been wasted in senseless debate on these resolutions. Grand stand plays for popular favor instead of deliberation of matters of material interest to the state as a whole. Residents of rural districts are asking, "What of the taxes?" The answer comes back from the "billion dollar capitol." "Both taxes, we are discussing the European war." I might also criticize the various committee hearings which call for witnesses to travel at their own expense, to protect their own interests, and then are adjourned until some later date, compelling the witnesses to return again at additional expense. In fact, there are numerous little bills before committees that could be quickly disposed of, that the hearings on are farcical and take valuable time of committees.

The petitions for the increase in railroad passenger rates from two to one and a half cents per mile is one of the problems that confront the present session. True, there is a bill in to this effect, but the temper of the legislators is opposed to its passage. It is political in character, based on the merits of opposition, not consideration, but the members are playing politics and say, "Why pass this bill to increase the cost of travel to the taxpayers when we were sent here to reduce their expenses? We do not take into consideration that this increase asked for by the railroads is necessary that they maintain their position on purely political reservation grounds. Perhaps they are right and then again perhaps they are not. Time will tell.

Before going to bed, I am going to give glad tidings to the farmers who lost their herds of cattle and their flocks of sheep through the hoof and mouth disease epidemic. The bill carrying with it financial relief, that is to appear from the committee room this coming week. The committee has twice had to change the total amount of the appropriation, and has about decided to increase it to a sum that will cover any emergency that may arise and prevent serious delay in being paid promptly. It is a good move and one that will be appreciated by the sufferers. The total amount carried in the bill is now a hundred thousand dollars.

Safety First

Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Ry.
John W. Allen, mechanic of the Milwaukee shops, received yesterday an engine for repairs, accompanied with the following message: "J. W. Allen, what is the cause of this?" and signed E. H. H.
The roundhouse chief thought that John J. Kelly, yardmaster, was behind the matter and turned the rolling stock with the note over to Dan Ward, chief of the engine house. Allen's chief of staff: E. H. H.—Engine 99—March 4th, '15. File 10067.

Janesville, Mar. 4, '15.
Mr. J. J. Kelly, alias E. H. H.
Referring to attached, I can see nothing the matter with engine 99, and think it would be just the one to use for switching service, as it is in much better condition than the present switching crews in Janesville yards.

Mr. Harry London, our chief inspector, says that with the following repairs the engine would be ready for passenger service: two pairs of wheels, one new smoke stack, one bell, headlight complete with cab, a few side rods, one coat front end paint, boiler full of water and firebricks full of coal. I might also mention that a new tank might help a little.

This engine has been used too much running on a curve and I would suggest that when it is again used, it be used on a curve running in the opposite direction, which ought to straighten it out.

Engine 99 may appear rather queer to you but I assure you that it was built for service over O. J. P's (Roadmaster Franklin) tracks.

I do not wish to hear any more complaints from you as to the condition of this engine.
Signed,
DANIEL BOONE WARDEN,
Supt. Terminals, C. M. & St. P. Ry.

The recently Yardmaster Kelly was the cause for the smashing reply of D. B. W. Mr. Kelly discovered the 99 in a dilapidated condition near the tracks where it had been dropped by some child in play. The 99 is a tin affair that winds with a spring. It was the depot chief force, however, that perpetuated the idea to secure Chief Inspector London's valuable ideas as to necessary repairs.
Incidentally, regarding Harry's breaking into print again, reminds us that the competition walk between him and Howard "Doc" Wade of the South Janesville C. & N. W. shops would not at all be premature at the present time owing to favorable weather conditions. Hides says that the lion of March will be upon us during the 7th, 8th and 9th of the month and weather adverse to the present will be upon us. Hackers of both speedy pedestrians and bicyclists get busy and have both sign up for the hike.

"Swinging on" freight trains after they have been set in motion is discouraged by the Baltimore & Ohio in a circular recently issued to trainmen. They are urged to get aboard promptly and before starting, in order to minimize the danger of bodily injury as well as to facilitate operation. It is held that boarding trains promptly makes it possible to attain the maximum speed more quickly, while it also obviates the necessity of the engine man dividing his attention.

The New York legislature is likely to repeal the "full-crew" law of this state. The senate republican caucus, which is understood to reflect the views of a large majority of the members of both houses, has voted in favor of the Spring-Conkling bill, which would repeal the law. In New Jersey a resolution has been introduced to appoint a special committee of nine members to investigate the claims of the railroads in favor of repeal and of the brotherhoods against it.

The Union Pacific system at the Exposition is reproducing the more important features of Yellowstone National Park. This concession located on "The Zone," covers four acres of space and several hundred thousand dollars has been expended in its construction. It is by far the greatest individual participation at this or any other exposition.

One of the features of the Yellowstone Park exhibit is the reproduction of Old Faithful Inn in exact architectural correctness. The inn will be the de luxe restaurant of the grounds, owing to the presence of the Official Exposition Orchestra, it promises to be the most frequented rendezvous of the exposition. Throughout the entire exposition season this orchestra of 80 pieces will give concerts in Old Faithful Inn. Who the director shall be has not yet been announced, but so eminent a man as Max Bendix will be the assistant director.

A CLERGYMAN'S STORY

REV. G. W. ROBERTS
OF
Hartsell, Ala., R. R. 2, Box 27

A BRIEF STATEMENT OF FACTS:

May, 1902 — "I suffered three years with bronchial affection. I had got so weak I had lost my voice. My friends gave me up. I was persuaded to try Peruna."
April 2, 1904 — "After taking Peruna I feel well and hearty, sleep soundly, weigh as much as I ever did. Do work on my farm."
Sept. 22, 1906 — "I am a great friend of Peruna. I am here today with my family because of Peruna."
Nov. 22, 1909 — "Peruna gave me back my life ten years ago. I am certainly thankful."
Jan. 13, 1910 — "I shall ever be ready to speak in praise of Peruna. My cure was almost miraculous."
Sept. 5, 1911 — "I feel that Peruna has been the means of prolonging my life for more than ten years."
Jan. 2, 1913 — "I trust that Peruna may prove a blessing to many, as it has to me."

The above are but the briefest extracts from long and enthusiastic letters, which we have received from this distinguished clergyman. In his first letter he said: "I had tried the treatment of several doctors, also home remedies, but they failed and all hope had gone. My friends, like myself, thought I was in the last stages of bronchial disease. My daughter brought me a bottle of Peruna and I decided to try it. I had got so weak that I had lost my voice. I thought it was of no use."

Who can doubt but that Peruna saved his life? Every home should be provided with the last edition of "The Life of Life." Furnished by

STREET DEPARTMENT AGAIN HAS TROUBLE WITH SNOW

Plans for the cleaning of the streets were put aside by Commissioner P. J. Goodman for the operation of the "snow brigade" who were kept busy yesterday and today cleaning the intersections. Fear is being entertained of an overflow from the river as the water has mounted to a dangerous point, and with the melting of the snow would raise the stream to some extent.

Saturday Night Talks To Prospective Home Builders

NO. 1

The Highest Type of Home Insurance

WISE home builders who pipe their homes throughout for gas consider such an investment as the highest type of insurance; for by equipping all rooms with the proper facilities for the use of gas appliances their dwellings can compete, in this one respect at least, on easy terms, for the next twenty years, with all buildings erected at a later date.

AND since the satisfactory operation of gas appliances depends to a large extent upon piping of proper size, it is to the interest of all concerned to consult with us relative to this matter.

"Is it not a question today," said Mr. Nagel, "whether we are over-regulating and placing too much confidence in the mere making of rules? There is some question whether the multitude of authorities attempting to regulate them. This is at one end and the powerful labor organizations are working at the other, and these same organizations are working in the legislatures advocating adverse legislation."

"The question today," suggested Mr. Nagel, "is whether we have not put our sole reliance on regulation instead of counting on the enterprise itself. Proper regulation is a good and necessary thing, but it is a question whether we are not regulating and placing too much confidence in the mere making of rules."

This question which has at last dawned upon the mind of Mr. Nagel and his associates has long been recognized by the intelligent people of the country. Its solution is of vital importance, and if justice influences action, returning confidence may be expected.

With the adjournment of congress the country will enjoy a much-needed rest, and unless our various commissions become offensively active there is hope that the timid capital may be induced to combat from cover. The nation is suffering from an overdose of political and court regulation, and nothing will revive it but the cheerful hum of the wheels of industry, which have been so long idle.

Confidence is one of the biggest words in the English language. It is loaded with significance because it is the foundation stone in the home, the church, society, and the great realm known as the business world. It represents an asset many fold greater than money, and often stands between a man and bankruptcy. After money is exhausted misfortune often overtakes men in business, but failures never result until the stock of confidence is impaired.

Confidence is a product of brain and heart combined. It means the honest confidence for a man may be as honest as the sun and as unreliable, financially, as a tramp. The man who enjoys the confidence of the business world has demonstrated that he is not only honest, but that he is capable as well. He has established a reputation for doing things.

What he may lack in the way of ready capital is made up in other things more important. He is thrifty and economical, ambitious, but scrupulously truthful and reliable, and confidence rewards, as the natural outcome.

Society is kept pure and wholesome in proportion to the stock of confidence employed. If slander and gossip tarnish reputation and weaken character the structure soon becomes honeycombed and disintegration follows. The best antidote for disease and decay is work, and the various clubs now engaged in civic betterment schemes will enjoy a two-fold reward.

The strength of the church in every community depends upon the amount of confidence inspired. The church of today represents more than a sanctuary. Its mission is larger than entertainment for the little flock which it shelters, for the great problem which confronts humanity, in the struggle for existence, is how to live clean and wholesome, rather than how to die.

The church of today, which enjoys the largest measure of confidence, is the church whose doors swing wide seven days of the week inviting humanity to enter with the same freedom which the saloon enjoys. The church which gets down to the level of the masses and wins people by helping them over the rough places. The home without confidence is a little hell on earth, and the final outcome in the tragedy is the divorce court. Domestic happiness, and confidence go hand in hand, until the blending of two lives which think as one, complete the union.

And with frock coat loose and slack. Smell the sulphur in the air. As the cuss words volley there. For a frolic or a fight. Someone has come back all right. Hear the language that's bombastic. Hear the comment that's sarcastic. He doth eloquently deride. As he gaily peels the hide. From the Democratic goat. Hear him chuckle, hear him gloat. Hear him talk of art and science; Hear him hurl the grim defiance. Rescued from the private life. Back into the worldly strife. Puffing clouds of smoke and swearing.

Some Seasonable Hints. If you can't sleep in the house nights on account of the oppressive humidity, try an out-of-doors sleeping apartment. If you can't afford to have one built on the back end of your house, buy a small tent and pitch it in the backyard. If you leave the taps on each end of the tent open the wind will sweep through and it will have the same effect as though you had one of the fancy screened-in-sleeping rooms. A little ice water during the day will relieve you from the heat and enable you to stand it better. Electric fans placed at various points about the home will also help. Put on your thin clothing. Fish net underwear serves to keep you cool. When a person is overcome by the intense heat on the street, soak his or her feet in hot water. Don't eat meat and keep your temper and you will be able to keep cool, no matter how hot it may be out of doors.

The Formula of Life. (The same being contributed by one of our brightest correspondents.) Love a little, spurn a little, give a little, earn a little, cry a little, chafe a little, sigh a little, work a little, pay a little, pray a little. Grib a little, scowl a little, chin a little, growl a little, use a little, take a little, lose a little, make a little, run a little, lag a little, pun a little, brag a little. Walk a little, roar a little, breathe a little, sleep a little, grieve a little, wait a little, hate a little, hope a little, wait a little. Outside of the fact that "breathe" and "grieve" do not rhyme, we think this a blamed good poem.

Oh, wondrous Spring, we welcome thee once more with open arms; We welcome thee within our midst with all thy varied charms. We greet thee, charming season, with a loud and joyful shout. We've got to go down cellar now our furnace fire is out.

Oh, balmy Spring, we will ere long get up each morn at dawn To get the neighbor's mower out and manure our lawn. We're glad to see you once again. We're glad to see you once again. We've got to stop this verse right here. Our doggone ink has frizz.

Spring Styles for Men. Cereus neckties will not be worn this spring by fastidious dressers. Pajamas will fasten about the waist with a puckering string. Flannel nightgowns will generally be discarded during the warm weather for those made of lighter material. Socks will have the peek-a-bo effect about the feet, particularly at the toes and heels. Shirtwaists will have a collar button behind and one in front and dress shirts will be fastened in front with white studs. Laced shoes will be popular this season. Trousers will contain quarter pockets behind.

Monroe Cardinals Lose Third and Deciding Game By Score of 43 to 26.—Reserves Beat Brod-head. The Lakota Cardinals obtained revenge over the Monroe Cardinals at Monroe last night, trimming the Green county champions by a score of 43 to 26, that erased the 19 to 13 score defeat three weeks ago. The Janesville team went out to win and they accomplished the result in the hardest fought and most bitterly contested match ever staged in Monroe.

In the first half, under collegiate rules, the Lakotas walloped the Monroe five badly, and had them outclassed by a wide margin. With a wood and Dalton playing in the forward positions, the Monroe guards found it difficult to prevent scoring or stop team work that piled 23 points for the Cardinals and only a bare 3 for Monroe. Dalton dropped three baskets, while Hemming and Ryan scored a like number. Ryan tallied his points from long range shots that put a crimp into the rival five.

Second Half. In the second half, under high school rules—namely, A. A. U.—the Monroe team showed to a better advantage, scoring 17 points to the Cardinals' 20. Atwood outdistanced his guard this session, and scored three goals, and Hemming kept dropping in the points much to the misery of the Monroe crowd, who had fond hopes of seeing the Lakotas defeated. Summary:

Lakota Cardinals: Atwood, If; Dalton, If; Hemming, c; Roberts, rg; Ryan, lg; Sherman, su. Monroe Cardinals: Callentine, rf; Staffacher, lf; Blumer, c; Voss, lg; Haren, rg. Field Goals: Hemming 6, Atwood 4, Ryan 6, Dalton 3, Roberts 1, Callentine 2, Staffacher 4, Blumer 3, Haren 2, Voss 1. Fouls: Blumer 2, Hemming 2. Reserves Win Game.

The Wisconsin Reserves, with a crippled lineup, defeated the Brodhead Athletics at Brodhead last night by the score of 18 to 17, in a closely fought battle on the Brodhead court. The Reserves did not play Davy or Skinner, who were saved to play against the Lakota Cardinals tonight in the game at the Auditorium. The Brodhead five gave the varsity boys a hard rub, and the outcome of the game was decided in the last minute of play, when H. Meyers dropped in two goals.

Game Tonight. The Cardinals are in fit trim to meet the Reserves tonight and despite the strength of the Madison aggregation, promise a victory. It will not be in the lineup, as the Beloit College man is at Ripon tonight, but a substitute player of good caliber will be in his place. Roberts, who took his place at Monroe, will play. The lineups of the two teams will be as follows: Cardinals: Hemming, c; Atwood and Dalton forwards, Ryan and Blair guards. Wisconsin Reserves: Skinner and Curtin guards, Davy and Meyers forwards, and P. Meyers center.

AMUSEMENTS

AT THE APOLLO.

Mary Pickford as "Cinderella." Mary Pickford, "America's Sweetheart," and the world's foremost film actress, gladdens the heart and thrills the soul in her latest characterization, in the Famous Players Film Company's novel production of "Cinderella," the Paramount Feature at the Apollo on Monday.

Mary Pickford as "Cinderella" is charm, grace and tenderness personified, and immortalized in a scene production of rare art and appeal. In the film version there is more than the impersonal value of the character of the original and world-famous story. "Cinderella" walks and breathes upon the screen as though it were a bewitching, dazzling being incarnated by memory and idealized by the tender recollections of childhood.

Particular pains have been taken in the production of this feature, and its many impressive settings and beautiful costumes greatly enhance the artistic and dramatic value of the subject.

Miss Pickford is aided by a superbly chosen cast in making her characterization one that will substantially add to the popularity of the famous little star. As we follow her through the story, and see her change from the pathetic little cinder-girl to the sovereign of all the main, including the figuratively larger domain of Prince Charming's heart, we cannot help admitting that she is without a doubt "the world's greatest motion picture actress."

AT THE APOLLO.

Wilton Lackaye in "The Pit." On Tuesday the Apollo will present 5-part photoplay, "The Pit," with Wilton Lackaye and Gail Kane in the leads. Frank Norris's novel of this name created a favorable sensation when it was published fifteen years ago, and the dramatization of the work by Channing Pollock, at the instance of William A. Brady, led to a successful play, in which Wilton Lackaye registered the greatest triumph of his career. It was inevitable that such a subject should be chosen, sooner or later, for treatment on the screen, and the World Film Corporation's business acumen in selecting "The Pit" for one of its releases has been justified by anticipation, as there is a widespread desire, it is found, on the part of the public to see a film with such a notable history.

For it is a notable history, centering in the desperate endeavor of a daring speculator in the "nineties" of the last century to corner wheat in Chicago. Produce "cornerers," or would-be monopolists, are never popular even in their successes, while in their failures, which are numerous, they furnish morals for the rest of us, who are, or should be, willing to learn from them.

This production is claimed by the Wm. A. Brady Picture Plays Co., to be the most strikingly dramatic of its present offerings. The wheat pit scene of 500, with real brokers and workers in the financial district figuring in it, is very sensational. It is the talk of the motion picture world, as marking a great achievement in the management of big crowds in the studio. Maurice Tourneur, the producer, has surpassed himself in "The Pit."

AT THE APOLLO.

Edward Abeles in "The Million." Edward Abeles, the distinguished star whose unusual mimetic talents are peculiarly adapted to screen work, appears in the leading role of the Famous Players Film Company's four-part version of Henry W. Savages' startlingly funny mystery-farce, "The Million," which appears on the Paramount Program at the Apollo on Wednesday.

The action concerns the pursuit of suit partners as presented on the stage, of the Cohan Theatre, New York.

The story of "Potash & Perlmutter" deals with the fortunes of Abe and Morris, who risk their all in order to save from a Russian prison a young man who has fled to the country to avoid persecution. The play teems with laughs, but there are also many sweet love-passages and touches of pathos that appeal to the heart and give to the comedy its lasting hold on the audience.

New York Theatre Managers Expect Spring Winds Will Bring Prosperity.—Dramatic Chatter. (By Beau Rialto.)

New York, March 6.—Whether or not there is calamity in the spring breezes for New York theatre managers, the cry of hard-times was not heard the other night when the Association of Theatre Managers of Greater New York gathered at the Waldorf. Charles Burnham, the personal president of the association, seemed to think that times would brighten on the Rialto and that ter-rapin would supplant mush for the actors, who have become used to a cornmeal diet.

Speaking of spring, the springiest of the new attractions will open next week at the Knickerbocker. It's "Fads and Fancies," described as a musical melody, and of such elaborate scenic construction that the Knickerbocker is closed this week while the stage is being prepared for the new-comer. Klaw and Branger, the producers, arise to deny that "Fads and Fancies" is a revue. They tried it first on Atlantic City, a summer dog which seldom gets fed in the winter months.

Channel traffic has been abandoned because of the war zone order and Gaby can't get to London with the Barrie revue, which, by the way, is coming over here some day.

At the Century theatre tomorrow night the most spectacular of American vaudeville stars will appear in the annual benefit for the Actors' Fund of America. The production will be under the direction of E. F. Albee and A. Paul Keith.

a ticket in a Mexican lottery that has drawn the big prize of a million pesos. The chase leads to extraordinary places, involves strange persons, and is a riot of fun.

Some of the funniest incidents, however, are quite apart from the chase itself. One is the Italian singer's rehearsal, in which is attacked by the different characters assumed by the burglar, (portrayed by Edward Abeles, and who, by the way, impersonates six entirely distinct characters throughout the production.)

The motion picture version of this unusually successful production even increases the humorous possibilities of the story, and throughout the four reels the laughter and fun never subside.

A capable cast has been gathered

They come direct from the Pabst Theatre, Milwaukee, where they have been drawing capacity houses at every performance. There are over fifty series of scenes taken as close to the firing lines as possible. The films present a moving and in a very real sense a living history of the great war from the beginning to recent date, and will be described in detail by the noted Lecturer Baron Edmund von Rakowski, an engineer in the 4th Elite Regiment of Berlin and one of the Kaiser's Honor Guards. There are scenes and incidents from both the eastern and western theatres of the war in the five thousand feet of films which were taken by special permission of the German Military authorities. These are not faked pictures, but actual scenes from the battlefields.

AT MYERS THEATRE.

"The Million Dollar Doll" will reign triumphantly forever. It has been a long time since any one composer has written such a string of useful song hits, as are heard in this big musical comedy.

Thirty-five people working every minute, with a laugh-every-minute farce comedy intermingled with twenty-two elaborate singing and dancing numbers, including the famous Maxine and Heston, make "The Million Dollar Doll" the best musical comedy ever brought to this city.

The girls, everyone, a beauty and "worth a million" were an astonishing array of the latest Parisian models. A special car, packed with scenery and wonderful electrical effects is carried and without a doubt this big show will be the hit of the season.

"The Million Dollar Doll" appears here Sunday, March 14, matinee and evening at Myers Theatre.

The merry musical farce, "The Million Dollar Doll" under the direction of Harvey D. Orr, appears here for two performances only next Sunday, matinee and evening at the Myers Theatre.

This is one of the few musical comedies with a real plot from the book of Harold DeWitt, with music written by Louis Vestyn, New York's most popular musical comedy writer. The Company includes thirty-five people, carrying a complete variety of scenery and electrical effects. This is the original cast and production, including the greatest singing and dancing chorus in America. Some of the big songs are "Society," "Night Time," "The Dancing Craze," "I Guess It Isn't Apt to Happen Again," "When a Fellow Needs a Friend" and eighteen others.

Charles A. Comiskey predicts that the race in the American league should be as close and exciting as any in history. He figures that every club has a chance, with the possible exception of Cleveland. Of course, Comiskey depends upon Eddie Collins to keep the White Sox in the race all the way.

CHAPTER XXIV.

In Which Land Shows in the Offing.

REACHED the switch, and an instant later a dozen high candle power bulbs flooded the suit with light. With a little cry of dismay Helena sprang away and stood at my shaving glass arranging her hair. Now and then she turned her face just enough to smile at me a little, her eyes dark, languid, heavy lidded, a faint shadow of blue beneath. And now and then her breast heaved as though it were a sea late troubled by a storm gone by.

"What will auntie say?" she sighed at last.

"What will you say?" I replied.

"Oh, brute, you shall not know! I must have some manner of revenge against a ruffian who has taken advantage of me while I was in his power!"

"Ah, heartless jade!"

"So you shall wait until we are ashore? I will give you sealed orders!"

"When?"

"Now. And you shall open them at your friend's house—as soon as we are all settled and straightened after leaving the boat—as soon as—"

"It looks as though it were as soon as you please, not when I please."

"Harry, it is my revenge for the indignities you have heaped on me. Do you think a girl will submit to that meekly—to be browbeaten, abused, endangered as I have been? No, sir—sealed orders or none. I have only owned I loved you. So many girls have been mistaken about things when the moon or a desert island or—or something has bewitched them. But I haven't said I would marry you, have I ever?"

"No. I don't care about that so much as the other, but I care a very, very great deal about it too. You too, are cruel. You are a heartless jade."

"And you have been a cruel and ruthless pirate!"

"No." And she evaded me and gained the door. "I must go. Oh, it's all ruin now. Auntie'll be furious. And what shall I say?"

"Give her sealed orders and my love! And when do I get mine?"

"In five minutes."

"She was gone. I looked about, sighing for that she was gone. Then I noted that our friend Partial had gone with her. 'Fie! Partial, after all, you loved her more!' I said to myself.

But in a few moments I heard a faint sound at my door. I opened. There stood Partial in the dusk, gravely wagging his tail, looking at me without moving his head. And I saw that he held daintily in his mouth a dainty note, addressed to me in the same handwriting as that on the note I had sent out from the heartless jade to you varlet. And it was sealed and marked with instructions for its opening—"When You Two Variets Meet."

To more.

"Peterson," said I, advancing to the yard deck, where I found him smoking. "I've been getting up some correspondence, since we'll be ashore by tomorrow noon."

"I don't know as to that, Mr. Harry."

"Well, I know about it. So tell Williams that, even if he has to work all night, we must be moving as soon as it's light enough to see. I've got a very important message."

"By wireless, Mr. Harry?" chuckled the old man.

"Yes, by wireless" (and I looked at Partial, who wagged his tail and smiled). "So I must get into Manning Island the first possible moment tomorrow."

Before the white sea mists had rolled away I was on deck and had summoned a general conference of my crew.

"Polyte," I demanded of our odd pilot, "it will be three days, four days, before a letter could get from the light-house to New Orleans?"

"Qui, maybe so."

"And how long will it take us to get to the plantation of M. Edouard?"

"Above there?"

"Eh! could not said, monsieur. Maybe three, four day—sais pas."

"Holy Mackinaw!" I remarked sotto voce.

By now Williams, who, judging by certain rappings, hammerings and clankings heard through the cabin walls back and above the engine room, had been at work much of the night, had reported and, much to my pleasure, we could go ahead.

So at last, after many windings and doublings, we came in at the rear of the timbered slopes and could see the mansion houses and the offices of the stately old plantation where dwelt my friend Edouard Manning, who knew nothing of my coming.

After custom I signaled loud and often with the boat's whistle, so that the men might come to the landing for us, and in order that Edouard himself might be warned I gave orders to my hardy mates to make proper nautical salute of honor.

"Cast loose the stern chaser, Jean Lahtie," said I, "and do you and L'Olonnais land and fire her often as you like until we land or until you burst her."

Gleefully they obeyed, and soon the roar of our deck gun echoed fearfully along the slopes as had no gun since the salt seeking Union navy in the civil war had pounded at the gates of Edouard's father and until scores of coots and rail chattered in excited chorus for nautilus and long clouds of wild ducks arose and circled over the marsh.

I saw now the two ladies, their fingers in their ears, also on deck, protesting at this cannonading at their cabin door, and so I raised my hat to a very radiant and radiantly appeared Helena for the first time that day, and heard the answer of L'Olonnais to the four protest of Auntie Lucinda:

"We follow Black Bart the Avenger, and let any seek to stop us at their peril! Jean, run up the flag while I load her up again."

And Jean having once more hoisted the skull and crossbones at our masthead and assumed a specially savage scowl as he stood with folded arms on our bow deck, we made what a mild imagination might have called rather an impressive entry as we swept into the Manning landing.

I was not surprised to see Edouard himself there, and his wife and some thirty odd dogs and as many blacks, waiting for us at the wharf. Nor was I surprised to see that all seemed somewhat to marvel at our manner of advent, though I knew that Edouard, through his fieldstresses, had recognized both my boat and myself long before we made the last curve and came gently in to the wharf where the grinning darkeys could catch our line.

What did surprise me—and perhaps for a time I may have shown surprise—was to see, in all this gay throng, two forms not usual on the Manning landing. One was the elegantly garbed and rather stunning figure of Sally Byington and the other the robust, full bodied, gorgeously arrayed form of my old friend Cal Davidson! How or why they came there I could not tell for the moment guess.

"'Tis he—yon varlet!" I heard a stern voice hiss at my ear. "Beshrew me, but it shall go hard with him! I'm loading her up with marbles now!"

But I had no more than time to persuade my two lieutenants to modify this purpose and partially to disarm themselves before the two groups were mingling, with much chattering and laughing and gay saluting.

Edouard, hat in hand, was on deck before our fenders touched the wharf, laughing and grasping my hands and looking up at my flag.

"I knew you were coming," said he. "Fact is, all the country's been looking for you. Davidson just got in a couple of hours ago, and you know his lady is an old friend of Mrs. Manning's. And—"

He was shaking the hands of Mrs. Daniver and Helena almost before I could present them.

"By Jove, old man," Edouard found time to say to me, "I congratulate you! She's away beyond her pictures!" He did not mean Mrs. Daniver, and he had never seen Helena before. I could only press his hand and attempt no comment as to the congratulations, for part of that was a matter which yet rested in a sealed envelope in my pocket, and at best it must be three or four days; but then, with a great flash of arrested intelligence it came borne in upon me that perhaps after all it was not so much a question of the tardy United States mails, because you varlet, fat and saucy and well content with life already, by some means and for some reason had outrun the mails. He was here, and we had met. It need not be four days before I could learn my fate. I reached into my pocket and looked at my sealed orders. No matter what Davidson's letter held, here was Davidson himself.

"Oh, I say, there, you Harry, confound you!" roared Davidson to me in his great voice above the heads of everybody. "I say, what did I tell you?"

CHAPTER XXV.

In Which I Admit I Was Jealous.

NOW, I had not the slightest idea what Davidson had told me nor what he meant by waving a paper over his head. "They've signed Dingleheimer for next year!" Now, what do you think of that? World's championship, and good old Dingleheimer for next year—I guess that's pretty poor for them little old Giants, what?" And he smiled like one devoid of all care as well as of all reason.

I myself smiled just a moment later, after I had greeted the Manning ladies, had seen Helena step up and kiss Sally Byington fervently, directly on the cheek, whose too keen coloring I once had heard her decry; had slapped Edouard joyously on the shoulders and pointed to my pirate flag and gloomy black visaged crew—I say I also smiled suddenly when I felt a hand touch me on the shoulder.

"Polyte, the pilot, stood, cap in hand, and asked me to one side.

"Pardon, monsieur," said he, "but those gentil hommes—those fat ones—see set she'll was M. Davidson who'll get letter on beam from those light-houses, heem?"

"Why, yes, 'Polyte—the letter you said would take four days to get to New Orleans."

"Polyte smiled sheepishly. 'He'll wouldn't took four days now, monsieur! He'll got it half those letter here. He'll change the coat on the light-house, maybe, han He'll got the coat of Guillaume wit' hall those letter in her, yass?' And he now handed me the entire packet of letters, which I had supposed left far behind us on the previous day!

I took the letters from him and handed all of them but one to Edouard's old body servant to put in the office mail. The remaining one I held in the same hand with its mate, and I motioned Davidson aside to a spot under a live oak as the other began now slowly to move toward the path from the landing up the hill.

"This is for you," said I, handing him his letter, and told him how it came to him thus.

"It's from Helena, dear old girl. Isn't she a trump, after all?" he said, tearing open the letter and glancing at it.

"She is a dear girl, Mr. Davidson," said I stiffly; "yes."

"Why, of course—yes, of course, I'd have done it if I'd got this before I left the city," said he, "but how can I now?" holding the letter open in his hand.

"Do you mean to tell me?" I began, but choked in anger mixed with uncertainty. What was it she had asked of him, offered to him? And was not Helena's wish a command?

"Yes; I mean to tell you or any one else I'd do a favor to a lady if I could, but—"

"What favor, Mr. Davidson?" I demanded icily.

"Well, why 'Mr. Davidson?' Ain't I your pal in spite of all the muss you made of my plans? Why, I'm dashed if I'll pay you the charter money at all after the way you've acted, and all!"

"Mr. Davidson, dash the charter money!"

"That's what I say. What's charter money among friends? All right, if you can forgive half the charter fee, I'll forgive the other half, and—"

"What was in the letter from her?"

"It's none of your business, Harry, but still I don't mind saying that Miss Emory wrote me and said that if I was still—oh, I say," he roared, turning suddenly and poking a finger into my ribs, "if you haven't got on one of my waistcoats!"

"The one with pink stripes," said I, still icily, "and deuced 'bad ones they are. And these clothes I borrowed from my China boy. But then—"

"I see, you must have come in a hurry, eh?"

"Yes. But come now, old man, what's in that letter? I've got one of my own here done in the same hand—hers. I am under sealed orders—until I shall have met you, which is now. So I suppose some sort of explanation is due on both sides. We might as well have it all out here before we join the house party, so as to avoid any awkwardness."

"Oh, nothing in my letter to amount to anything," he replied. "Miss Emory only wanted to know if I'd please have her trunks shipped out here from New Orleans—only that—and she asked me please to bring her a box of marshmallows, as hers were all gone. She's polite always, dear old Helena. She says here: 'So pleasant is my journey, in every way, and so kind have you gentlemen been, and so thoughtful in providing every luxury, that I cannot think of a single thing I could ask for except some more marshmallows. Jimmy, the young inn-keeper's nephew, you know—has found mine, though I hid them under both cushions in the state-room."

"I had my hat off and was wiping my forehead. A sudden burst of glory seemed to me to envelop all the world. If there had been duplicity anywhere I did not care."

"Can't you open your letter now?" said Cal.

"Yes," said I, and did so. It contained just two words (Helena afterward said she had not time to write more while Auntie Lucinda might be in from the other state-room).

"Well, what's it say, dash you?" demanded Cal Davidson. "Play fair now—I told, and so must you!"

"I'm dashed if I do, Cal!" said I, and put it in my pocket. But I shook hands with him most warmly.

"But I say, old man," began Davidson presently, "it's all right for a joke, but my word, it was an awfully big one and an awfully risky one, too—your stealing your own yacht from me! I didn't think it of you. You not only broke up my boat party—you see, Sally was going on down with us from Natchez—Miss Emory said she'd be glad to have her come, and, of course, she and Mrs. Daniver made it proper, all right—I say, you not only busted that all up, but by not sending a fellow the least word of what you were going to do you got those silly newspapers crazy from New Orleans to New York—why, you're famous—that is, notorious! But so is Miss Emory, that's the worst of it. I don't just fancy she'll just fancy some of those pictures or some of those stories. Least you can do now is to marry Helena and the old girl, too, right off!"

"In part that is good advice," said I. "I wish I could wear your clothes, Cal—but I remember now that Edouard and I can wear the same clothes and have many a time."

Expect No Shortage of Food Despite European War Demand

The 1914 wheat crop of the United States was estimated to be 891,000,000 bushels. The estimated surplus carried over from the 1914 crop was about 75,000,000 bushels. There was, therefore, a total available supply of 967,000,000 bushels. As the normal annual per capita consumption of wheat in the United States is about 53 bushels, 530,000,000 bushels should meet our normal domestic requirements for food; in addition, 90,000,000 bushels are required annually for seedling, 610,000,000 bushels, therefore, should supply the normal domestic demand. This would leave a surplus of 257,000,000 bushels. Of this surplus about 210,000,000 bushels were exported by January 30. This left 47,000,000 bushels, or 46,000,000 bushels more than our average annual export for the past five years, for export between February 1 and for appearance of the new crop, or for carrying over into the next crop year. The amount is sufficient to permit the export of nearly 1,000,000 bushels a day until July 1, before which time the new crop will begin to be available. This is about the average recent exportation.

The large demand for our wheat arises from the fact that there was a considerable shortage of wheat in the United States. It is estimated that from that source there will be available 100,000,000 bushels. A surplus of 75,000,000 bushels or more from India will be available in May and June. The increase in the fall sown wheat acreage of the United States in 1914 was 11.1 per cent, or over 4,000,000 acres; in the northern hemisphere generally the acreage of winter wheat shows an increase of from three to thirty-three per cent, as follows:

Denmark 3 per cent
Italy 5 per cent
Switzerland 10 per cent
United Kingdom 10 per cent
United States 11 per cent
India 22 per cent
Canada 33 per cent

But suppose a shortage in wheat should develop in the next three months, what would be the situation? There is a great surplus in other food crops in the United States, a number of which can be used as substitutes. Wheat does not constitute more than 12% of the normal diet, about the same as poultry and eggs. Meat and dairy products constitute 48%; vegetables 11%; fruits, nuts, sugar, fish and other items, the remaining 19%. There are larger supplies of corn and other grains, meat animals, dairy products, potatoes, and fruit at the opening of 1915 than for many years. The most important competing products are corn and potatoes. This is shown by the fact that while the normal consumption of wheat is 5.3 bushels in Maine it is only 4.7 bushels, and in Michigan 5. In the wheat growing states where wheat is abundant, such as Minnesota, the average is 7.2 bushels in the South, where corn is much used, the average is 4 bushels. Corn crop is consumed as food, for our total crop, about 80 millions would be used for food, the remainder for other purposes. The remaining substitutes used for animals. The potato production in the United States averages 3.8 bushels per capita. This year the available supply is 4.1 bushels. The average price of meat animals was 7% cheaper in January than a year ago, but 2% lower, the price of chickens slightly lower, of potatoes 35% lower, and of apples it was 27% lower.

It would seem that the United States is not likely to be threatened with a shortage of foodstuffs.

What It Cost Him.

"My darling," she murmured, "you were so grand, so noble, when you proposed to me that day in the taxi! Shall I ever forget how touchingly you spoke of your future, of the sacrifices you would make for me? It must have cost you something to speak those words."

"It did, Mabel," replied the young man, a shadow creeping over his face. "It cost me about two weeks' salary for the hire of that taxi."

WOMAN'S PAGE

SIDE TALKS

By RUTH CAMERON

WHAT TWELVE CENTS BOUGHT.

"Never in my life," said Molly, the little stenographer lady, "did I get so much pleasure out of twelve cents as I have these last three weeks."

"The moving pictures and two sticks of gum," guessed the wants-to-be-cynic.

Molly gave the ladylike equivalent of a snort. "You know very well I don't ever chew gum," she answered him indignantly.

"What was it, Molly?" asked the lady-who-always-knows-somehow, pacifically.

A Bargain in Happiness.

"Four narcissus bulbs," responded Molly. "And, Oh Lady, we've had such fun over them. You can't imagine how much. I never happened to have any before for my very own and I didn't know how wonderful it was. You know the throne bowl I had Christmas? Well, it simply had to have some flowers in it so that's how I happened to get the bulbs and I've only had them five weeks and they've blossomed already. I used to think it took them so long that it wasn't interesting, but you could almost see these grow. You know you have to put them down cellar for two weeks and when you take them up I think they're just aching to grow for they begin to sprout the minute they see the light."

Chasing the Sunlight Round the House.

"We were all so excited over them that we've been chasing the patches of sunlight all over the house with that bowl. Why aren't the boulers got so interested that I found him moving them from one window sill to another, and you know he's rather a stick. We all had a wager up on what day the first blossom would come and mother won, so we clubbed together and bought her a box of candy."

"Of course that was exciting, but just watching them grow was the best of all. It's so perfectly fascinating, you know, to see them change from day to day. First they're just the little tiny shoots. Then, before you know it, they're growing tall and slender like a young girl growing up all of a sudden. Then someone discovers a sheath of buds. Pretty soon the buds begin to poke out of the sheath and change from green to white, and finally someone calls, 'Oh, look quick, here's a flower.' And sure enough, there it is just like a little star. And then pretty soon the rest come out and there's a whole cluster just as if that bud sheath was one of those lovely rockets that break into a burst of white stars."

Like Seeing the World Created.

Molly paused, drew a long breath and looked into the fire for a moment. "I don't know as I can tell you just how I feel," she began again falteringly, "but down underneath the fun of seeing them grow there's a wonderful, solemn part to it. It's kind of like seeing the world created, if you know what I mean."

"I think I do," said the lady softly.

The cynic stood with his back to them fumbling in a book case. Molly looked around at him questioning. "You're laughing at me?" she accused, "and turning your back to hide it."

But the cynic was not laughing. He was looking for a book. He found it and opened it. "Someone else felt the way you do, little girl," he said. And then he read:

"Flower in the crannied wall,
I pluck you out of the crannies,
I hold you here, root and all in my hand,
Little flower—but if I could understand
What you are, root and all and all in all,
I should know what God and man is."

ARMY GIRL IS TO WED THIS SPRING

Miss Julia Turner Heyl.

Miss Julia Turner Heyl, elder daughter of Colonel and Mrs. Charles H. Heyl of Washington, is engaged to marry Mr. Joseph Clay Hahersham Colquitt, formerly of Atlanta, Georgia, but now of Washington. While there is no definite time set for the wedding it is expected that it will occur in the early spring. This will make the second wedding to occur in Colonel Heyl's family within a year. Miss Helen Heyl, the younger sister, was married to Lieut. Milo Fox, of the army engineers, last fall. Mr. Colquitt is connected with the interstate commerce commission in Washington.

CLUB WOMEN OPPOSE BILL FORBIDDING NIGHT HOURS FOR GIRLS UNDER 21 YEARS

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., March 5.—The Bray bill prohibiting the employment of women or girls under 21 between the hours of 10 p. m. and 6 a. m., which was introduced at the behest of the consumers' league, had opposition in representatives of that organization at the hearing Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Joseph J. Madison, representing the Wisconsin Consumers' league, and Miss Martha Piley, Madison, of the Madison branch of the league, appeared against it, as did Mrs. Louis Wahlenberg, Madison, for the same cause. The bill, which Chester D. Barnes and John H. Bryan, Kenosha; Fred C. Ellis, Milwaukee, for the Wisconsin Telephone company, and E. J. Kneen, Bangor, of the independent telephone company, the women opponents were strongly for the intended objects of the bill, but urged that it did not go far enough, and advocated removing the age limit fixed in the bill. Senator Bray spoke for his measure as one aimed to advance the moral and physical welfare of women and girl workers throughout the state.

The same committee—education and public welfare of the senate, is having on the Staudenmayer bill creating civic secretariats in communities in the person of the school principals or other officers, to supervise non-partisan gatherings of citizens in school buildings and otherwise carry out the social center idea. Edward J. Ward and John A. Hazewood, among others, spoke for it, and Senator Staudenmayer, a member of the committee, made the assembling of arguments for it a personal matter and is trying earnestly to secure its passage. The bill is strongly endorsed by Miss Zona Gale, a constituent of Senator Staudenmayer, who is held in very high regard by the Columbia county member.

Others appearing for the bill were Rev. D. Q. Grabill, Evansville; Mayor H. K. Kayer, Madison, and President A. H. Yoder, Whitewater normal school.

WOMEN HOLD MEETINGS IN BERLIN PROVIDE FOR ECONOMICAL LIVING

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Berlin, March 6.—Berlin is the scene at this time of numerous meetings, largely attended by women of various classes, at which ways and means for more economical living are discussed by prominent physicians. The women are being urged to cut down the consumption of meat by at least 15 per cent and to resort more to the use of milk. The women are asked to think of the men in the field and the hardships they have to endure. If economy in eating seems to be too difficult.

One physician, speaking the other night, likened the situation to that of the tourist, who performs must at times make a meal from chocolate and bread until more favorable circumstances arrive. He told his audience that they were mere slaves to appetite if they were not able to elect easily to eat less of the scarcer foods.

Soup in place of coffee for the early morning breakfast is being urged by some physicians, especially for adults, and then the omission of the German "second breakfast," the consequent saving of thousands of pounds of food stuffs.

Household Hint

THREE MAPLE RECIPES.

Maple Cake—One cup sugar, one or two eggs, half cup butter, one cup flour, half teaspoon soda, one teaspoon soda, cinnamon and cloves to taste, two cups flour.

Maple Cookies—One cup maple syrup, half cup butter, one egg, two cups flour, half teaspoon soda in water at the last; drop heaping teaspoonful in pans and bake.

Maple Taffy—One quart maple syrup, piece butter size hickorynut; boil until it will harden in water; pour into greased platter and pull when cool.

BREADMAKING HINTS.

After your bread has been stiffened, remove every drop of dry flour; grease pan with lard; bread will not stick to pan, neither will there be any dry flour to stick to loaves.

When baking bread, trim off all burnt edges of state bread soaked in lukewarm water and beat it into your sponge. Proceed in usual way to bake bread. A good way to use a stale bread while flour is so high. You would never know you had baked stale bread.

In making light bread, after having first been mixed and kneaded, let it rise twice before molding in loaves and making. You will have much better luck with the bread.

UP-TO-DATE RECIPES.

Cheese Fritters—To use up old cheese, half pound cheese soaked well in small pieces, one pint sour milk or water, half teaspoon salt, one teaspoon baking powder, flour to thicken like pancake batter. Have griddle hot.

Delicious Dumplings of Left-Over Mashed Potatoes—Chop fine one good-sized onion, one-half bunch parsley, same amount celery. Soak bread slice in English walnut, boil fifteen minutes in salt water, then drain. Take good-sized tablespoon butter, some bread crumbs, let brown light brown, pour over dumplings and serve.

Michigan Ivory Cake—Whites of five eggs, one cup sugar, 2 1/2 cups flour, half cup butter, half cup milk, one teaspoon cream of tartar and half teaspoon soda. Mix butter and sugar to a cream, and milk, then flour in which soda and cream of tartar have been sifted, then add beaten whites of eggs. Flavor to taste.

Baked Apple Sauce—Peel, core, quarter apples to fill one quart measure. Spread these over bottom of greased dripping pan. Sprinkle liberally with sugar and nutmeg, dot with small pieces butter. Then take one tablespoon cornstarch, dissolve in two tablespoons cold water, pouring over this one point boiling water; stirring until it looks like a clear starch. Pour this over apples and place in oven until nicely brown, or apples are well cooked.

French Cream Cake—Three eggs (beat yolks and whites separately, then mix them), one cup white sugar, 1 1/2 cups flour (sifted), one teaspoon baking powder, two tablespoons water, one teaspoon vanilla. Mix together quickly. Bake in quick oven in two-layer cake pans. When done, remove from pans and split each layer in two. While cake is baking make the following cream: One pint milk, two tablespoons cornstarch, two eggs (beaten till light), one small cup sugar, one-half cup butter, one teaspoon vanilla. Scald milk, add sugar, the dissolved cornstarch and butter, cook until thick. Remove from heat, add butter and vanilla. Peel one orange very thin, chop rind very fine (do not grate), add it to the cream while hot and spread between layers of cake. Let stand several hours before serving.

FISH DISHES
Crab Salad—Two cups Japanese crabmeat, two cups celery, one cup salad dressing, salt, pepper and garnish. Pick crabmeat over carefully, removing any particles of bone. Add celery cut into small dice. Season with salt and pepper and mix all together; add salad dressing (either mayonnaise or boiled), garnish with lettuce, peppers, bee trout or any preferred garnish, as for instance, hard-boiled eggs or stuffed olives. Pour a little extra dressing over top and serve very cold.

Deviled Lobster—Two tablespoons butter, one tablespoon dry mustard, one-half teaspoon salt, one tablespoon Worcestershire or tomato sauce, one teaspoon lemon juice, one can lobster, one-third cup butter. Beat the two tablespoons of butter to a cream, add mustard, salt, sauce and lemon juice. Divide lobster into neat pieces, saute for about six minutes in one-third cup butter and, when nearly done, add creamed mixture. Heat whole thoroughly and serve on toast.

Cerulean Shrimps—Two tablespoons butter, one teaspoon salt, one cup grated onion, 1 1/2 tablespoons flour, 1 1/2 cups stewed strained tomatoes, one bay leaf, salt and pepper, one can shrimps. Melt butter, add onion juice and flour; stir until smooth, then add seasoning, tomatoes and bay leaf; stir constantly until boiling. Pick over shrimps and heat them in the sauce. Serve plain or with boiled rice.

VIENNESE THEATRES HAVING SUCCESS WITH PRODUCTIONS.
[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Vienna, March 5.—Notwithstanding the war Viennese theatres have been doing an excellent business, especially the Imperial Hofburg Theatre and the Imperial Opera House. Both of these were closed for some weeks after the usual date for reopening, pending arrangements with the leading actors and singers for a reduction of salaries. Finally it was agreed that all salaries of less than fourteen hundred and forty dollars a year should remain untouched, but the higher ones should be reduced fifty per cent. This was done in view of the fact that the number of performances would be limited to four a week and the prices of admission reduced one-half. The consequence was that the public flocked to Opera and Hofburg and both houses were sold out at every performance.

It was understood that this arrangement was only temporary. Now the prices of seats have been advanced twenty per cent, and the higher-paid actors and singers receive seventy-five per cent of the salaries paid to them before the war.

Under the new schedule boxes in the Imperial Opera house cost from four to ten dollars—each holds four persons—parquet seats from eighty cents to two dollars and twenty cents; seats in the three galleries from twenty-six to eighty cents. Standing room on the floor behind the parquet, ten-four cents and in the third and fourth galleries respectively, sixteen and twelve cents.

If you don't see what you want in the want ads, tell the public what you want.—the cost is but a trifle.

HELPS JAPS OPEN EXPO PAVILIONS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Wiesbaden, March 5.—As the first step toward establishing in the various baths of Germany nursing homes for injured Austrian, Hungarian and Turkish soldiers, a committee has been formed here, with ample funds at its command, to investigate the feasibility of such action.

The hotels and pensions of the sort will be utilized as homes for the wounded allied soldiers, and the springs and "cures" in each place will place, free of charge, all their facilities, including medical treatment, at the disposal of the proponents of the plan.

MADE IN AMERICA PRODUCTS ARE SHOWN.

New York, March 5.—The first industrial exposition of the "Made in America" type was to begin today at the Grand Central Palace. The exposition is the direct result of the recommendation of Mayor Mitchell and Commissioner Harrison for the instigation of a plan to get the people of the country better acquainted with American goods.

The only requirement governing the allotment of space was that the goods must have been made or grown in the United States.

REFORM OF SCHOOL SYSTEM IN TURKEY TO GERMAN METHODS.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Berlin March 6.—In the midst of war Turkey finds time to begin the reform of its school system and has turned to Germany for a leader in the movement. The man selected for this purpose is Professor Franz Schmidt, who has hitherto held charge of a bureau of education in the German Ministry of Education. He formerly conducted a German school in Bucharest, and he has been a close student of foreign education in the Turkish Ministry of Education. Apparently he will play a role in the general educational life of Turkey similar to that played by the German military instructors in the Turkish army.

WHY HAIR FALLS OUT

Dandruff causes a feverish irritation of the scalp, the hair roots shrink, loosen and then the hair comes out fast. To stop falling hair at once and rid the scalp of every particle of dandruff, get a 25-cent bottle of Dandruff, get a drug store, pour a little in your hand and rub well into the scalp. After a few applications all dandruff disappears and the hair stops coming out.

Animal Jingles

FOR LITTLE FOLK
BY ALICE CREW GALL

CAN YOU GUESS IT?
And did you guess the TIGER—that great ferocious beast?
All right; then here's another one to try.
The animal I have in mind looks something like a dog.
And everyone agrees that it is sly.

Its family is a large one, and they live in many lands;
You've seen them roundabout here, I dare say.
Some members of the family have fur of lovely white,
And some of them have black, or red, or gray.

It has a long and bushy tail, that's sometimes called a "brush";
It has four feet, and pointed ears and nose;
Its food is birds and berries and tiny quadrupeds
(You know what quadrupeds are, I suppose).

Sometimes you'll find it living in burrows underground;
Sometimes it lives in caverns formed of rocks,
And always it is crafty and as sly as it can be.
You've heard the saying, "Cunning as a F—"

Well, well, I nearly told you this crafty creature's name;
I'm sure the guess you make will be correct;
If you are going to guess them so quickly every day,
I'll have to make them harder, I expect.

"CHRIST ROSE" POEM SENT TO MEMBERS OF REGIMENT

Berlin, March 6.—From a member of a guard regiment of Berlin now fighting on the western front, comes the story of a "Christ Rose" that blossomed on Christmas Day, to illustrate the sentimental side of the soldier and to show that it is far from being obliterated by war.

The guard regiment lay virtually inactive in a trench for weeks. A few yards in front in a hole torn in the earth by a French shell, a rose began to grow. At the risk of their lives the soldiers cared for the plant jealously, but could not induce it to bloom.

On Christmas Day, however, the long-looked-for flower appeared, and was duly plucked and sent to the emperor. The latter, overjoyed at the incident, had Richard Voss, the poet, epitomize the incident in poetry, and sent a copy of the verse to each member of the regiment.

Your Piano Can Be Converted Into A PLAYER PIANO

UPPER AND LOWER BOARD REMOVED TO SHOW PLAYER.

Its appearance will only be changed by the addition of doors in the upper and lower front boards. The keyboard will remain unchanged and the instrument can be played by hand as before if you so desire.

I will install an 88-note player action in your piano and guarantee satisfaction at a very reasonable price, and on easy terms. Your piano with this high grade player action installed will equal any $600.00 Player Piano on the market today.

On Saturday Afternoon and Evening, in the Carpet and Rug room of the J. M. Bostwick & Sons store, (second floor) I will demonstrate one of these actions which I have installed in the piano of Carl F. Brockhaus. This Piano has been in use for 12 years and makes a very fine Player Piano.

Mr. B. K. Sattergren, President of the Sonorus Player Action Company of Chicago, will be present and will be pleased to talk to any one interested in Player Pianos or Player Actions.

Don't trade away your good piano for a Player Piano of inferior make when you can have a first class Player Action installed in your present Piano at cost. 65-note Players changed to 88-note.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

Nell had solemnly resolved to like the Kansas town which was to be her home, but the heart did within her as they drove to the hotel in a swaying old bus.

The view from the rattling window was unspeakably ugly. In the first place, the time was a early spring and the little winter had a cumulated in the dooryards; fences sagged, loaves of boards rattled and sprang up menacingly as a people passed a wooden sidewalk. Early as it was, a cloud of dust arose from every sing vehicle. She sank back on the moth-eaten old cushion and closed her eyes.

"Are you tired, dear?" asked Dick anxiously. She was very pale. "I'll be all right after I rest awhile," she answered without opening her eyes. "My head aches." She had almost said heart, but changed to head in time.

Drawing the shades in the bare hotel room, she lay down with a wet cloth on her head and Dick went away and left her to sleep.

About an hour later he tiptoed into the room.

Heart and Home Problems

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am considered very pretty, but I am losing weight now from worrying. A year ago last fall I met a tall, dark fellow who I think I can never forget. He took me to Chicago to wed me, but after a month to gether he left me alone and forsaken, because my folks disowned me for going away with him. I am a mother now and never can forget him, although I do not know where he is. What would you advise me to do? Do you think I will ever forget him? I have plenty of good chances to marry, but I will not pay any attention to any one. I will think just baby and I. I have plenty of money and I go to big cities and am going to the San Francisco fair alone. Do you think it is safe? What would you advise a nervous wreck to do who cannot even write a letter any more? Do you think that if I went back to the farm my nerves would be better?

F. L. M.
Dear little girl, you will learn to think less and less of the man with whom you have had so tragic an experience. This trouble has not ruined you by any means, and you must stop worrying about it. Do not think of marrying just now, you will know your mind so much better when you are older and find splendid men who are worthy of you. Ask your parents to let you come home. At first, if you return, you will be troubled by gossip, but you can easily overcome that if you prove yourself to be a good, strong mother. The fair would be a terrible strain for a nervous woman with a baby. Wait and visit California at another year's time: you will have chances to see other fairs. If I were you, I would consult a nerve specialist; he might give you some valuable advice. As long as you are uncertain only the companionship of baby you could probably be very happy on the farm, try to make more friends if you go there; a lonely person is unusually morbid, and you owe it to baby to be cheerful. I do not understand about the money you have. Never accept it from men.

This girl's experience should be a warning to other girls who may consider leaving home to marry against their parents' wishes.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a young girl of eighteen years and am considered very attractive by my companions. I am desperately in love with a young man twenty years old, but unfortunately, he is very wicked. Now what can I do to make him really care for me?

RUFFLES.
Do not let him come to see you too often; have other boy friends; and of all things do not be afraid of losing him. Play fearlessly and differently as though he were well-chosen. Do not forget you are a woman; he does particularly if there is anything he is compliment him about. Interest yourself in the subjects in which he is interested and talk about them.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) Is it correct form when meeting a young man on the street to ask him to call on a certain evening if he is not in the habit of calling?
(2) Should a young man lay down his own raps or should the girl offer to do this, and also offer to help him put them on, or?

OLD FASHIONED.
(1) No, it is not correct form. If you are talking to him some place beside on the street you might ask him to call, but let him set his own time.

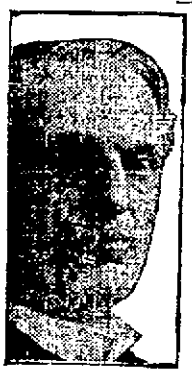

(2) The girl should show the man where to lay his wraps, but let him put them there himself. She should never help him to put them on.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: What colored suit would be best for traveling?
Gray. It will not show dust or soil.

BERLIN "HELLO GIRLS" GIVING AID TO TROOPS WITH THEIR CONCERTS
[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Dealing With Excuses

By REV. HOWARD W. POPE
Superintendent of M.
Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

Let us begin the most common of all excuses, "I Am Not Very Bad."

The mistake which this man is making is that of judging himself by a false standard. The remedy is to correct his standard. Say to him, "It may be that you are not very bad in your own estimation, or in the opinion of others, but let us see what God says about you. His Word is the only true standard."

Open your Bible and ask him to read aloud Romans 3:10. There is none righteous, no, not one. After he has read it, ask him a few questions: "Whose words are these which you have read?"

"God's Words."

"Does he know the real condition of a man's heart?"

"Yes."

"Does he know a man's heart better than the man himself?"

"Probably."

"Who does he say is righteous?"

"He says that there is none righteous."

"What, not one?"

"No, not one."

"I suppose not."

"Then you admit that you are not really righteous?"

"I suppose I must."

Ask him to read Romans 3:23. Then say to him, "Who does God say have sinned?"

"All have sinned."

"Are you an exception?"

"No."

"Then you admit that you have sinned and come short of the glory of God?"

By this time the man is becoming uneasy. He is beginning to realize that whatever he may be in his own estimation, in God's sight he is a sinner. You have withdrawn his attention from the inconsistent church members with whom he has formerly compared himself, and you have fixed his mind upon the great God to whom he must give an account.

Another good verse to use with this class is Isaiah 53:6. After the man has read it, ask him, "Who does God say has gone astray?"

"All of us."

"Does that include you?"

"I suppose it does."

"What does he say we have done?"

"We have turned every one to his own way."

"Then, according to God's Word, having one's own way is sin?"

"So it seems."

It is well to emphasize this point strongly, for to the average person the word "sin" means some form of vice or crime. According to this verse however the real essence of sin consists in having one's own way, instead of walking in God's way. It may not be an immoral way, or a dishonest way, or an untruthful way, but it is his way and not God's way, in which he ought to walk.

Returning to the verse you can ask, "What do you say of a sheep which has gone astray?"

"It is lost."

"Then if you have had your own way through life instead of doing God's will, you too are lost, are you not?"

"So it appears."

"Admitting then that you are a lost sinner, what does God say that he has done with your sins?"

"And the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all."

"Then your sins have made it necessary for Jesus to die on the cross?"

"Yes."

"When Jesus took your place on the cross and died for your sins, you refused to acknowledge him as your Saviour, did you not?"

"Yes."

"And you have never once thanked him for what he has done for you, have you?"

"No."

"And yet you say you are not very bad. If this is not bad, will you tell me what is? There is only one thing worse, and that is to continue rejecting such a Saviour."

In dealing with self-righteous people it is well-nigh useless to argue. Neither would it be a very gracious thing to tell them that you thought they were great sinners. They would not believe it if you did, and quite likely they might retort, "And you are another."

The only effective way of dealing with them is to bring them face to face with God, and make them realize that they are dealing with Him rather than with you.

Another way is to ask a person if he knows that he has committed the greatest sin a man can commit. He will probably answer, "No, I have not." Ask him to read Matthew 23:27, 28.

SAMUEL ANOINTED KING.

It is a fascinating picture of primitive, rural life. The son of a rich Benjamin farmer is rounding up the stock which has been allowed to graze at large. Toilsome and vexatious work! At the suggestion of his servant, who also furnishes the gift which etiquette required the young man turn aside to the town where the sear lived. Meeting the village girls at the common fountain they inquire for the prophet. They are bidden to hasten if they would see him before he begins the religious festivities of the day. The sear, the searcher for lost asses meet, and the latter, his faithful attendant, is given the seat and portion of honor. That night, on the flat roof of the house, the high calling of the prophet, Oriental home, the patriotic and devoted prophet poured out his soul to the rustic hero, the predestinated king. No doubt he dwelt upon the national peril as how prevalent it was. He kindled a new passion, patriotism—in his young auditor. There began that change, which by means of which a farmer was metamorphosed into a king. The secret unction, official salute, and trip sign are given, and Samuel and his separate. As a further preparation for the high calling, the prophet tutored youth seeks a school of the prophet's own founding, and familiarizes himself with the triangle of Hebrew—Mosaic law, inspired poetry, and sacred music. The change of character and occupation, so unlikely and unexpected, gives rise to the proverb, "Is Saul also among the prophets?" On the very scene of his memorial on the Samuel assembled Israel to publicly and officially renounce the power which he had wielded so long and faithfully. This was a great satisfaction of what had been done in secret. The same process which marked Achaz as offender, and Matthias as apostate, designated Saul as king. The element of chance was stricken out, and trickery forestalled by a superhuman guidance. The ordeal for Saul was trying in the last degree. He could have no doubt of the outcome of the lot-casting. The responsibilities of an office so novel in Israel bore down upon him like a flood—a national decline to be stemmed, an invasion to be resisted, public morals to be reformed. No wonder the inexperienced youth hid himself in the camp baggage. It was a game of hide and seek, but the seekers were successful. A moment later, they led the king-elect into the presence of the national assembly. It was a crisis hour in Hebrew history. Would he accept? Would the civil legislature approve the choice? The patient ingenueness of spirit, the heroic physique, gigantic stature, ruddy countenance, piercing eye, all predisposed in the candidate's favor, and the ratification is proclaimed in the prophetic greeting to the king. True, there was a recalcitrant minority, a base element, that hoped to make merchandise out of their opposition. They withheld their homage and their token of fealty; but the person of the king was provided with a bodyguard, loyal and alert. The statesmanship of Samuel was increased by this instant. He does not sulk at the slight put upon him and his judgment. He is bent on his country's weal. He knows that limitations can be placed upon the monarchy while still plastic, which can not be when once it has been set. He is conversant with the divine retributive rules relating to kingship, recorded by Moses. He announces them in the hearing of the king and the assembly. Both parties made and deposited upon the national archives. This is safely launched upon the stream of history, the first constitutional monarchy known to man.

THE TEACHER'S LANTERN.

Israel, the king as well as wanted one, but their use grew out of their inability to the divine principles of government. Their consisted not in asking for a representative of power, but in getting into such a state as to make monarchy indispensable. . . . Had they cultivated religion in heart and home, and observed God's laws in private services, and obeyed God in the matter of their relations to the heathen, there would have grown up an ideal republic, characterized by an ideal righteousness and its concomitants, safety and joy. This was possible. But in it Israel failed. The next best thing, namely, needs be done, namely, accede to the request for a king. . . . The guiding principles of the monarchy had been previously announced, namely, candidate to be a native Israelite, luxury to be eschewed, collection of tribute, the formation of a barem, extension of territory, and the reformation of these principles.

March 7, 1915. Proverbs 3, 13-18.

At first glance the Book of Proverbs seems as disconnected as a dictionary. But it really is not. There is a thesis underlying all of it. It gives continuity to its apparently miscellaneous contents. It makes it cumulative, and carries it to a powerful and convincing climax. The contention of Proverbs is: Virtue is wisdom; Sin is folly. With Solomon virtue and wisdom are synonymous and interchangeable. For example you may read the proverb, "Apply the man that findeth virtue." Virtue is richer than silver, merchandise gold silver can buy. Honor, vity, honor, wealth, pleasure, peace come from virtue. The millennium is here in human mass are virtuous. Hell is here in the ratio that the thousand million are sinners. Virtue is wisdom. Sin is folly.

ANTI-BOXING BILL IS BEING FAVORED

Bill to Repeal State Boxing Commission Will Be Given Hearing on Friday.

Madison, Wis., March 6.—The bill to repeal the state boxing commission and prohibit boxing in this state under heavy penalty will be given a hearing Friday afternoon by the assembly committee on state affairs.

The bill was introduced by Assemblyman Julius Hansen today. It provides for a state penitentiary sentence of five years for persons who shall engage in a prize fight, and two years for a physician who shall attend the contestants in the ring.

"I have talked this matter over with the former members of the legislature and they are practically unanimous for the repeal of the law," said Assemblyman Hansen today. "I have received scores of letters from Milwaukee protesting against the sport, and petitions will be presented from the people of Wisconsin. I told the truth about these matches next Friday by me."

Had a Good Reason.

"Why do you never make any money?" "Because I am so particular about the company I seek," replied the man who is ever self-reliant. "A fool and his money are soon parted. I associate only with wise men."

The New Ready-to-Wear Department To Be a Novel Feature

Milady Who Goes A-Shopping Will Appreciate The Conveniences We Have Arranged For Her Here.

Ranged along one end and the back of our new store where the light is best, we have arranged a cozy nook to be devoted to displaying our ready-to-wear garments. The new display cases are models of their kind, any garment in stock can be seen almost at a glance. There are plenty of high grade French plate mirrors in which one can see how correctly the garment fits and whether this or that fold hangs just right. And then there are the dressing rooms in which to try on garments, each arranged with an eye to comfortable surroundings. We predict that the women of this part of the state will delight in this section.

Today we moved from our old office, which has housed our business affairs for so many years, into the new and larger quarters we have laid out for our office at the rear of the store. It was like deserting an old friend. Memories of earlier days, memories of half forgotten conversations, recollections of business transactions which had a bearing on the future and of how hard we worked in that little old office, arose within us and

THE BOY FARMER

Or a Member of the Corn Club
By ASA PATRICK

Copyright, 1915, by American Press Association.

"Well, I think the acre for the contest is all right," Sam replied. "I put one ton of ashes and two tons of manure on it, then, but it broke deep, cross broke and barrowed. Three tons is a big lot of fertilizer to put on one acre, but I don't think I can get too much on that land."

The agent's eyes brightened. "Good!" he encouraged. "You'll make a farmer if you keep up that lick. That land is in the shape, and it'll soak up all the moisture from the rains and snows that fall from now until spring. The idea is to store up all the moisture you can for use by the growing crops in summer when rain is scarce. The only way to do that is to get the land plowed deep and thoroughly pulverized. Whenever you see a patch of ground that's been plowed five or six times to kill out Bermuda or Johnson grass you always see a fine crop growing on it when everything around it is a failure. It seems as if farmers ought to learn from such examples."

"When is the best time to break land?" asked Sam.

"Oh, it ought to be done in the fall," Mr. Burns replied. "Get the land in good condition and sow a cover crop for winter of rye or oats. By plowing the land in the fall you break up the bones of insects and turn them out to freeze. A big majority of the insects that work on crops spend the winter in the fields and around the fence rows. So if you don't want to be bothered with insects break the land and clean out the fence rows in the fall."

"I've made a little extra money hauling manure from a stable," Sam explained, "and I'm going to spend it for some good books along the line I'm studying. Could you suggest one or two good ones, Mr. Burns?"

"There are any number of good books on farming and kindred subjects," said the agent. "You should get a catalogue. But I would suggest that you get 'Cobbett's Swine Husbandry' and 'Book of Alfalfa.' These books are by a real farmer, and he knows what he's writing about. The first, of course, is about raising hogs. The second tells all about alfalfa, from the earliest times to the present. It is real interesting, too, much better reading than some of the novels that they call best sellers. 'The A B C of Bee Culture' is a fine work on beekeeping. 'How Crops Grow' will tell you a lot about agricultural plants that you don't know, and 'Life on the Farm' is a little book that is very interesting and full of helpful suggestions."

"Don't tell me any more," Sam exclaimed. "I want to read them all, and my money won't hold out. But I'm going to buy those five and study them, especially the ones on hogs and alfalfa."

"Well, bees are worth studying, too," said Mr. Burns.

"I don't know much about them," replied Sam, "but I shouldn't like getting stung."

"No need of it," said the agent. "Once you understand them they give no trouble, and the honey they make is almost clear profit."

"If that's the case I think I'll get a few hives."

"One or two will be sufficient to start with. If you take care of the swarms you'll soon have as many hives as you need."

"What I want to get more than anything else," continued Sam, "is some registered hogs. Do you know where I could get a sow or two pigs?"

"No; don't believe I do," said the agent. "Want registered stock, do you?"

"Yes, sir; it doesn't take any more to raise them than it does scrub, and they are better and sell for more."

"That's a good idea," remarked Mr. Burns. "You're on the right track. I see you're got some plans. Sam, what are you figuring on doing?"

"Well," replied the young farmer, "for the first thing I'm going to peg along on the little farm of mother's and do the very best I can with what I've got and with what I know."

"And then what?" asked the agent.

"Next fall and winter sister and I are going to complete the high school course. Then I'm going to make another crop, and if things go well I'll take a course at the State Agricultural college and let sister also take a course there in domestic science."

"And after that what?" queried Mr. Burns.

"Well, after that I'll take up the work that I have already started and carry it out to a finish. I want to make mother as comfortable and independent as possible. I want to make the land productive and put up good fences and buildings. I want to stock the place with the very best there is in every line—Jersey cows, Berkshire hogs, Angora goats, Plymouth Rock chickens, Peking ducks, Bronze turkeys and even a colt dog. Of course I don't mean to say that these breeds are better than others, but I like them and know they are good."

Mr. Burns did not laugh at Sam's desire for a shepherd dog.

"There is need and room for all you mention," he said, "even to the dog."

"But that's not all," Sam continued. "I want things around the house to be pretty and pleasant. I want books and magazines and pictures and a big yard full of flowers. Don't you think a person can have such things on a farm?"

"I don't think anything about it," replied the agent. "I know it. You can have them and should have them. The farm is, first of all, a place to live, and it should be made as pleasant a place as possible."

"You haven't named a thing that is out of reach, Sam. And it is very thoughtful of you to keep your mother and sister in mind in all of your plans. They certainly are proud of you and have reason to be."

"When I get all that work done," said Sam, "I'm going to buy a farm for myself and do with it just as I intend to do with mother's. After that I don't know what I'll do. I haven't planned any further, but I guess there'll be new dreams by that time."

"Yes, there will, Sam," said Mr. Burns. "There will always be something new calling you to further endeavor. But you'll take a delight in it just as you have delighted in this other. It's a man's work you have set yourself, and it's worth doing."

Sam Powell went home with the agent's last words running through his mind. He couldn't forget them, nor did he for many and many a day.

CHAPTER IV.

It was the 1st of April when the Powells moved back to the little farm, and there was a look of real happiness on Mrs. Powell's face when she was once more settled in that quiet nook. The farm lay back from the public road and was screened from view by a grove of trees in the pasture. The weather beaten farmhouse was also sheltered and shaded by a cluster of wide spreading oaks.

But Sam and Florence were no less pleased than their mother to be in the country again. To live in the country and to know the ways of nature is to love it always.

Before moving, however, they all had made several trips to the old home and done much work in the garden, orchard and field. The old orchard, after receiving special treatment by Sam, surprised Mrs. Powell so that she began to look on her son as a very remarkable boy. When they first looked at it in February it was an unpromising sight. Dead weeds and briars stood shoulder high, sprouts had grown up around the trees, and it looked as if there was but little life left in the orchard, so many were the broken and dead boughs.

"You might as well chop down the old trees," said Mrs. Powell. "They are nearly all dead anyway."

"Don't you believe it!" exclaimed Sam. "You just wait till I get through with those old trees. They look mighty shabby now, but they'll come to life if you give them a chance. I've just been reading about how to work over old orchards. Why, mother, if I was to cut them down and plant young trees it would be three or four years before we would get any fruit."

"Yes, I know that," replied his mother, "but I don't think these old trees will bear any more."

"Maybe not," said Sam, "but we can try them. I can plant young trees in the place of the ones that are entirely dead."

So he set to work, mowing down briars and weeds and raking them into piles and burning them. When this was done he took a saw and a pair of pruning shears and began on the trees. All the dead and broken limbs were cut away. The orchard had been neglected so long that there were many dead boughs, and it was a different looking place when Sam finished pruning.

The next thing he did was to buy some chemicals and make a solution after a formula given in one of the government bulletins. With this solution and a hand sprayer he went over the orchard and sprayed each tree from top to bottom. Next he broke and barrowed the ground, and the old orchard had one more chance to live and thrive, for it was well pruned, the ground in fine condition, and the spraying had killed all the insects that were on the trees.

Sam, like his mother, felt rather doubtful about the orchard, but when they moved there in April they found the old trees a mass of pink blooms.

"Look, Florence!" exclaimed Mrs. Powell when she saw the trees looking so beautiful. "Sam is sure a wonder. I didn't think he could do it."

"Oh, I'm a regular Burbank," said Sam, smiling.

"Who's Burbank?" asked Florence.

"Burbank," Sam replied, "is called the plant wizard. He can do anything with plants. He took the cactus and made it grow without thorns. He took two wild berries and made a large berry that is good to eat. He took the little wild daisy and originated the large Shasta daisy. He has made potatoes and tomatoes grow on one stalk, and he has grown a white blackberry. That isn't all. He has done hundreds of wonderful things with plants."

"Well, Mr. Burbank," said Florence, with a happy laugh, "that's a pretty good job on the orchard."

Soon after moving to the farm Sam had his first chance to get what he so much wanted—some registered Berkshires. A neighbor who was moving out of the county came by where he was working.

SIDE LIGHTS on THE CIRCUS BUSINESS

By D. W. WATT

(Copyrighted.)

In the mid-30's in company with Adam Forepaugh, Jr. we made a trip from Philadelphia to Baltimore for the purpose of engaging H. O. Messier, one of the big attractions with the show, to run a season on the hippodrome track. Henry Messier, as he was known in the business, was one of the big attractions of the country, and he took part in all the big events at Madison Square Garden, all the large cities clear through to the coast, in what they called a six day go-as-you-please. This meant to go out for six days and nights for the championship of the world. In these events the track men would gather from all over the world, England, France and Scotland always being represented by their champions.

While Henry Messier, who was a Frenchman, was never a champion, he was one of the best men in the country, and always a dangerous rival, and in the big events, I never knew Henry to go out in a long contest of that kind worse than any other rider.

In all the big events he was either second or third, but Henry seemed to be unfortunate in a way, and in the greatest race of the kind ever given, the English Forepaugh, Jr. was the only six starters. This was in Madison Square Garden in New York, and the opening night every seat in the great two or three day of the show, thousands of standing room tickets were sold, but one of Henry's knees got to troubling him along toward the last could get, but it amounted to a fortune. First money was something over $17,000, and as it was divided into several purses, Henry's amounted to several thousand.

Young Forepaugh and I were unable to secure Henry for the season, for a stated salary, of so much per week because he had been used to getting a good slice of the receipts, and no kind of a stated salary looked good to him. While as I have said before, Henry Messier never was a champion, a few years later, he was matched against the champions of all the different countries at different times, and there ever was a world's champion that Henry Messier did not beat single handed. Yet in his events, where they would always be fifty-two to seventy-five starters, Henry seemed to be the fall guy that would always meet with some kind of hard luck.

Last week I met a man on the street who carried me along for a time in conversation, and finally said, "Dave, I guess it's no use. You don't seem to know me." I said to him: "No, you have certainly got the best of me." "Well," he said, "this is Henry Messier." From that on for some good times that we enjoyed together thirty years ago.

Henry is now 63 years old, but carries his years lightly, and would readily pass for a man less than 40. If a man is a good listener, Henry could certainly entertain him for a couple of hours and tell him many interesting stories of a six day go-as-you-please event, not only in this country, but all over Europe. Henry was always a good mixer and never was back on a friend and while that kind of entertainment lasted a few years, it got to be a past time of the past. Henry had some money, a good education and a pleasant way to meet, so it was not hard for him to get a good position in other business.

He is now traveling on the road for a large wholesale house, and a nice home in Milwaukee. He expects to spend the balance of his life there. He left me he assured me that some day during the coming summer, he would drop in to Janesville and be my guest for a day or two, when we would go back and rehearse the old days over again.

One of the most important positions around the circus and especially one of the big ones, is that of the equestrian driver. His business is to see that the show is started at two o'clock, and kept going fast, and is out and over at 4 o'clock. In order to do this and especially with the big shows, he must have everything in readiness and have his acts as the saying goes, "pass at the ring bank." This means that when one act is going out, the other must pass them at the ring bank going in, so that there will not be a minute's wait.

In order to do this kind of work he must be a leader of men and have absolute control over every one in the dressing rooms. It is also his business in connection with the boss property men to place the trucks of the different performers, and see that they do not occupy too much space, as where there are two or three hundred people and every one with a rule, the room they would use it at would take a dressing room as big as the big top to accommodate them. So must not only be in the business, but he must give those under him to understand that he is the boss.

Not so long ago I visited one of the big shows and spent much of my time in the dressing room, where the equestrian director was known to be engaged to go to another show the following year. As he was a high class undoubtedly have a great deal of weight as to who would be his successor the coming year he could easily see that there were at least three rivals for the job for the coming year. These three men had been in the business for years, and were all competent for the work they had to do, but the man they had to beat held the job for some years, as they all knew that a good word from him toward securing the prize. This position is always filled by a performer, not necessarily a high class one as far as his act might go in the ring, but one that can control the people and carry the show through without a hitch.

The best equestrian driver that I think I was ever with the Burr Robbins show, was in '79. At the first rehearsal he took his book and made a schedule of the acts and called them all into the dressing room and told them where their act would come in, and what act would open the show, and the one that would close the show. This, you can readily see, does not always please the average performer. Any high class performer is always glad to open the show for two reasons. One is that the show is supposed to open with a head liner, and the other is that it gets him out of the ring early in the afternoon, so that there is time to do something else if necessary. But there are often changed around for I never knew a performer that wanted his act to be the last one on the list, as this always kept them from the dressing room until the close of the show, and then many of the people would start home and more or less would never see the act.

Among great equestrian directors of their day were James Melville, who was a great rider, Robert Stickney, another rider; Bud Gorman, who was the equestrian director last year, the Hagenback-Wallace, but of all those never known a better one than Adam Forepaugh, Jr. He could certainly put in more acts and run a show faster than any equestrian director that his father ever had. Young Adam was the equestrian director of the Forepaugh show for several years before the death of his father. He was a great rider and one of the greatest elephant trainers that the world ever knew. He was a good handler of people and had the respect of all the people in the dressing rooms, which he came in contact with.

With the great Ringling show, Al Ringling, the older of the brothers, has always been a prominent figure in the dressing room of the show, from the time they first started in the business.

Last year at the coliseum in Chicago, Al would stand at a ring bank and blow his whistle for the acts, the same as he had done for more than 25 years, and when I asked him why he did not turn that job over to somebody else, also occupy an easy chair and watch the great show, he said: "Well, Dave, I started at this work early in the game, and I rather enjoy it. It seems to be hard for me to do this, but somebody else could do it just as well."

This in many cases is quite true. For it is an undisputed fact that the whistle of the boss will bring quick returns. I expect every day to hear of the opening date of the big show, some of the principles who will take part the coming year, and this I will tell you later.
